From the President—Brett Plummer

Well folks spring is here and the phones are beginning to ring for what we hope is a busy summer season in the household goods moving industry .

If you have been in the business as long as I have you have excitement as well as apprehension when “Peak Season” arrives. Statistics prove there are more families moving between the months of June through August than there are resources to cover their needs. When demand is high and our resources are thin there is a recipe for potential service failures. It is very important to keep training and hiring “good people” to join our industry and to thank the employees you have that are dedicated to the cause.

We are fortunate that the Household Goods Moving industry is regulated and enforced in the state of NC by the Utilities Commission, Public Staff and NC Highway Patrol. The intent is to provide the public protection from illegal movers and insure that all certificated movers are doing their part to provide professional services and adhering to the MRT or Maximum Rate Tariff .

It is very important that we follow the procedures set forth by the Commission and being a member of the NC Movers Association provides all of us the resources to educate your employees and properly conduct our profession in a positive way.

As most of you know the NCMA and Public Staff provides MRT training seminars as well as Driver training seminars throughout the year. We are also considering more training \ learning opportunities at our annual convention in Charlotte November 3-6. Hopefully our members will be willing to let other employees attend the convention and learn “tricks of the trade “ from some of our presenters. Please call me or Pam Stanley our Executive Director of The NCMA to help with any questions or concerns you may have with policy ,procedures and ideas to make us better serve you.

I want to thank you for your membership and look forward to seeing or hearing from you soon.

Following Distance

Objective: To assure that employees understand the importance of a safe following distances and how to maintain a safe distance

In the rush and anxiety of everyday driving, following distance is often sacrificed for getting somewhere faster. However, when you do not allow enough following distance, you not only put yourself at risk, you fail to save time and may cause further slowing of traffic.

Determining a Safe Following Distance

1. Determine an appropriate distance from the car in front of you, using one of the following methods.
 - To use the three-second rule, select a fixed object along the roadway, and assure that it takes at least three seconds for your vehicle to pass it from the time the vehicle in front of you passes it.
 - To use the car-length method, maintain a distance of at least one car-length for every 10 mph.
2. Create an additional cushion of space between your vehicle and the vehicle in front of you. The benefits of having a safety cushion include:
 - Giving drivers time to recognize and react to changes or emergencies on the road
 - Allowing cars to change lanes and make turns without interrupting the flow of traffic
 - Keeping traffic moving
3. In certain conditions, add additional distance:
 - In wet, slick, or other inclement weather conditions
 - At night or in other low-visibility conditions
 - When following a motorcycle
 - If being followed by a bus or semi
 - If pulling a trailer
 - If being tailgated

Scan for Authorized Movers

Scan for Moving Guide

Make sure you agree up front on the moving date, costs, and packing details. Authorized movers may negotiate rates based on a Maximum Rate Tariff established by the NC Utilities Commission (NCUC).

Organize and plan ahead. Obtain copies of all signed and completed documents with the company's name, address, phone number, and NCUC certificate number noted.

Value your possessions properly. Ask your mover to explain the two types of valuation protection offered. Settlement of any claims depends on the valuation you select.

Ensure your mover is authorized to perform your move by checking the list of authorized movers at <http://www.ncuc.net/consumer/carriers.pdf>.

Insurance is required by the NCUC for all authorized movers. Unauthorized movers may not be properly insured, so you may not be reimbursed for damages or loss.

Telephone the Public Staff at 919-733-7766 if you need assistance with intrastate moves or encounter unauthorized movers. Useful information is also available online at <http://www.ncuc.net/ConsumerGuide.htm>.

The NC Utilities developed this card to explain moving to shippers. You can print it out and distribute it as you see fit. It's a handy way to get the word out as to what to look for in a mover. It even has the code to show who are the legal movers right on the card! It also has the code for the Moving 101 brochure.

Email Scam Alert: Ransomware is on the rise!

Beware the growing proliferation of RANSOMWARE. It can wreck your business if you aren't careful. Make sure everyone in your company reads this, and make sure you have current secure backups of your computer systems.

You sure can tell it's spring break time just from reading all the SCAM EMAILS out there – many of which I promise you want to plant ransomware on your computer, especially if they tell you to click on a zip file attachment! I still hold to the personal theory that all these are from smart kids abroad who are figuring out how to pay for college, which is why I notice the explosion of this type of email when most schools are on break.

Please be sure your employees know that those mysterious anonymous moves from the UK to "city" are NOT real; you are not being summoned anonymously for a court appearance; the USDOT/FMCSA does not want your banking information; and for goodness sake, NEVER CLICK ON A ZIP FILE ATTACHMENT to an email unless you know for doggone sure it's from a legitimate source. ("Dear ncmovers here's your electricity bill" – seriously?!) When in doubt, throw it out! If it's somebody legitimate, they won't be anonymous about it.

Business Ethics Doesn't Have To Be Hard. Read These 5 Tips

One of the most important qualities that people look for in any organization is ethical behavior. You want to be able to assure your customers that their business is appreciated and that they will always be treated fairly. Here are a few easy tips to follow when it comes to business ethics.

Business

Ethics Should Exist in All Levels of Business

Ethical behavior should be practiced from the highest level of the business all the way down. If it is expected that all employees act ethically, they should see the same behavior from their superiors. If the head of the company and upper management cannot act in an acceptable manner, it will be nearly impossible to expect anything but the same behavior from other levels.

Business Ethics Should be Practiced Internally

Business ethics is not just for customer-facing positions. Every employee should be treated ethically as well. The way that an employee is treated should be an example of how management expects a customer to be treated. A high level of ethics should be evident from the time that a perspective employee is interviewed and continue for the duration of the time spent with the company. When employees are promoted to upper levels of management, the code of ethics should be deeply embedded in the behavior and serve as an example for others.

Stick to the Basic Principles

As evidenced by many current news stories, it is not uncommon for large corporations to be accused of unethical behavior. As a leader in business, it is important to stick to the principles that helped the company grow from its modest beginnings. Many customers say that they love to patronize small businesses because of the personal attention they receive and because they feel appreciated. These basic principles should not be forgotten as the business grows.

React to Problems Immediately

As with any business, there are going to be problems. It is important to address any issues immediately instead of hoping that it will just go away or remedy itself. When it comes to an unhappy employee or an unsatisfied customer, a simple acknowledgement of the issue goes a long way, especially if the solution is not instantaneous.

Rely on the Facts

As human beings, it is natural to want to react emotionally to certain situations. If a customer is yelling at you over an issue, the initial reaction may be to retaliate or become defensive. Don't be so quick to just to conclusions or create an opinion on the manner before gathering all of the facts. Reacting emotionally can cause the situation to spin out of control very quickly. You want to get to the root cause of the issue at hand and then work toward a solution instead of laying blame.

Following the above principles may seem like common sense, as they should. Remember that you are dealing with people, not just numbers or statistics. In order to be successful in business, you have to be able to create a positive environment that is ethics rich.
